Genesis 10:1–5

1 Now these are the records of the generations of Shem, Ham, and Japheth, the sons of Noah; and sons were born to them after the flood. 2 The sons of Japheth were Gomer and Magog and Madai and Javan and Tubal and Meshech and Tiras. 3 The sons of Gomer were Ashkenaz and Riphath and Togarmah.

Genesis 10:1–5

4 The sons of Javan were Elishah and Tarshish, Kittim and Dodanim. 5 From these the coastlands of the nations were separated into their lands, every one according to his language, according to their families, into their nations.

Ice Age

The World After the Flood

The world following the Flood was not as stable as before. For at least several hundred years, volcanic eruptions and earthquakes were common, and weather patterns were severe and erratic.

This worldwide instability resulted in the "Ice Age."

Causes of an "Ice Age"

- Conditions needed for snow and ice to accumulate:
1. extensive evaporation from oceans;
 2. extended snowfall;
 3. reduced snow melt.
- All of these would result from the Flood of Noah's day.

Causes of Ice Age

Warmer Oceans

The oceans before the Flood were warmer than today. During the Flood, much heat was added to the oceans from the “fountains of the great deep” and geologic upheavals. This would cause greater evaporation.

Colder Continents

Without the former “greenhouse” canopy, the barren lands in the northern latitudes became colder than before. The difference in temperature between ocean and continent would cause intense storm patterns to develop. The result—more snowfall.

Volcanism

As the continents rose, many enormous volcanic episodes would result. Volcanic debris in the atmosphere would shield the earth from much of the sun’s warming radiation. Thus much of the extensive snow would not melt in the summer.

The “Ice Age” would continue as long as these conditions prevailed, probably from 500 to 1000 years after the Flood.

The 1815 Eruption of Mt. Tambora: “One of the Most Powerful in History”

- 1816 is known as the Year Without a Summer -
- In Britain and Ireland, cool temperatures and heavy rains resulted in failed harvests..
- In Massachusetts: severe frosts occurred every month; June 7th and 8th snow fell,, even freezing the roots
- In China, the cold weather killed trees, rice crops, and even water buffalo, especially in the north.

Worldwide Migration

Worldwide Migration

The green area indicates exposed land resulting from a drop in sea level of several hundred feet due to the "Ice Age." This phenomenon helped to make it possible for man and beast to spread throughout the world as God had commanded.

“Now these are the records of the generations of Shem, Ham, and Japheth, the sons of Noah... 5 From these the coastlands of the nations were separated into their lands, every one according to his language, ... families, into their nations”
